DETAILED ACTION

1. A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on 12/12/2008 has been entered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claim 23 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Tokoro et al (20020167865) in view of Baur et al (6705601). The reference discloses a balance spring 30 made of carbon (Par. 014, line 1) for a balance wheel 20. The thermal expansion and thermal elastic coefficient specifications are not set forth in the reference. However, it is known from Baur et al that the frequency of the balance spring oscillator in timepieces is dependent on temperature variations which affect the thermoelastic coefficient of the spring as well as the thermal expansion of the spring and balance (col. 1, lines 18-24). Patentee further suggests at col 1, lines 63-67 that to correct for temperature changes, the thermoelastic coefficient and the coefficient of thermal expansion of the spring is adjusted in relation to the thermal expansion coefficient of the balance to compensate for these changes. Consequently, it would be obvious for one skilled in the art to select these coefficients in the balance spring and balance of Tokoro et al in such a way as to compensate for thermal variations of the system, as suggested and well known from Baur.

3. With respect to the added limitation pertaining to a negative coefficient of thermal expansion in the axial direction, carbon and carbon nanofibers are known to have a negative CTE in the axial direction and a positive CTE in a transverse direction. Thus, one of ordinary skill in the art, being aware of these properties of carbon nanofibers would select appropriate materials and CTE's to compensate for thermal variations in the system of Tokoro, as taught by Baur.

4. Claims 1-22 are allowed.

Response to Arguments

5. Applicant's remarks have been given careful consideration, but have not been found persuasive. The additional limitations in claim 23 fail to add patentable subject matter, as noted above.
